Health and Safety Guidelines

The touring party of Radiohead, and all contractors, subcontractors and venue/ promoter staff agree to adhere to the following guidelines with regards to Health and Safety.

All suppliers and subcontractors shall submit evidence that they and their staff are competent to carry out the tasks that they are employed to do. Suppliers, including subcontractors, shall have and be able to produce valid public liability insurance and, in the case of companies, also employers liability insurance.

All suppliers have produced risk assessments and or method statements for their elements of the production. Radiohead have an overall production risk assessment that considers interactions between show elements. Subcontractors are expected to be familiar with the findings of assessments and risk controls for their department and the overall Radiohead assessment. Copies are available from the production manager and on each bus.

Overall responsibility for safety of the touring crew (and band while on or around the stage) rests with the production manager. The stage manager will ensure work on the stage proceeds safely. Individuals are responsible for their own safety and for ensuring the safety of others including the general public.

This applies to risks that may result from the tasks that are undertaken in the normal day-to-day operation as well as obviously high risk operations.

Any persons that are unsure of the acceptability of a hazard or its control should refer to the Production Manager for clarification. If in doubt, ask. Risks that are identified and have arisen from the actions of a third party should be controlled and be brought to the attention of the Production Manager.

All accidents or near misses should be reported to the Production Manager.

Controls of risks should be implemented on an exposure to risk/ consequence basis.

It will be left up to the individual to assess each situation, but the Production Manager will intervene if the need arises. The following example is given to help with the making of risk assessments for all activities.

(a) Steel toe capped boots should be worn by those unloading/ loading trucks and who therefore are exposed to the risk of falling objects for a significant period. Staff who might lift one flight case per day would be considered at minimal risk and would not be required to take the extra control of wearing protective footwear.

Personnel needing to work at height should refer to the document "Radiohead working at height requirements."

All persons shall be fit for work when called. No one is permitted to work whilst under the influence of alcohol or drugs.

Radiohead reserve the right to remove any person from an activity or ultimately from employment on the tour/ show if it is deemed that their actions are a hazard to other working personnel or the general public. Verbal warnings will be given.

Radiohead working at height requirements.

The following is an outline of requirements for persons working for, either directly or indirectly, Radiohead production. These requirements are for the safety of workers and are not negotiable.

Safe work at height requirements have been implemented through EU directives in all the countries to be visited. Therefore applying the principles and practice required in the UK will not only ensure safety but should be enough to comply with the law in that country.

For the purposes of this policy, work at height is defined as any work or access above 2m where a fall is possible unless additional precautions are taken. Remember work at height is the single biggest cause of death at work. ALL WORK AT HEIGHT IS HIGH RISK.

General principles to follow before undertaking work at height – answer in order

1 Does the work need to be done at height? Can the work be brought to the ground? Can the work be carried out from a properly fenced walkway or platform?

2 We are touring specific access equipment. Touring crew should not 'borrow' equipment from venues where available without permission of the production/ stage manager and venue staff.

3 There will be many situations where Personal Protective Equipment (PPE) is the only reasonably practicable solution to the access problem. You should not, however, forget that PPE should be the last resort after considering the above first.

Radiohead rules for working at height using PPE for protection:

Contractors have supplied the names of crew they have deemed competent to work at height. The production manager and stage manager have copies of this list. If you are not on this list you may not work at height.

Contractors and or subcontractors are responsible for providing PPE such as harnesses and lanyards. It is your responsibility to check PPE is serviceable and properly adjusted each time you use it – YOUR LIFE DEPENDS ON IT.

Persons working over 2 meters must wear a suitable full body harness with double adjustable lanyard and be clipped on to the safety system installed by a Radiohead approved rigger or a solid structure (capable of withstanding the forces of a person falling whilst attached to it) at all times with at least one leg of the lanyard. The active leg must be shortened to minimize the potential fall distance. Tools should be tethered to ensure that they are not dropped. A safe drop zone should be cleared beneath the working area. All pockets should be emptied and long hair should be tied up.

Work at height will not take place above the band or members of the public.

Once the initial rig is complete no one should gain access to the truss or roof without informing the stage manager who will coordinate work on the ground accordingly.

There is no reason why anyone should ever work at height where they are at risk of a fall. If you do not know how to achieve this then you will be deemed unsuitable to work at height.

These requirements are constantly under review, if they change you will be given notice as soon as possible.

Richard Young, Radiohead Production Manager. October 2003.
